Issue 59

Tasted June 15, 2015

Marc Colin Chassagne-Montrachet “Chenevottes” 2013 Burgundy, France

Score: 92

This wine was bottled only two weeks before I tasted it; as such it's not surprising that some would display some residual sulfur. A classic Chassagne aromatic profile of orchard fruit, resin and a hint of petrol gives way to rich, round and relatively full-bodied flavors that possess excellent complexity before concluding in a lemony and strikingly long finish. This succulent effort is impeccably well-balanced and I would note that it's also a bit finer than it usually is. Worth checking out.

(Sweet Spot, Outstanding)

Score: 87-89

A fresh, ripe and restrained nose offers up notes of ever-so- slightly exotic aromas of pear and white peach with limited Chablis character. There is good energy to the concentrated middle weight flavors that possess a lightly saline quality on the balanced finish. This forward effort should drink well young. (87- 89)/2016+
