The 2012 Corton-Bressandes Grand Cru comes from the domaine's 0.48-hectare of vines planted in 1956, 1986 and 1994 in roughly equal measure. It is surprisingly understated, but refined on the nose with scents of raspberry jam, fresh strawberry and cured meat. The palate is medium-bodied with sweet, what might be described as a -playful- entry. There is plenty of joie-de-vivre infused into this Corton-Bressandes that is feminine and lithe towards the finish. This should be approachable after bottling, although it has the substance to suggest it will age well for two decades.
